

After class, three students sat together on a bench. They began sharing what they had heard at home about God.

Student 1 was worried: "I don't understand who really is God. Is it Lord Rama, Lord Krishna, or Lord Isa Kristu?"

Student 2 sat quietly, listening to Student 1 and Student 3, who were sitting on her left and right.

Student 3 was also confused:

"I don't understand it either. Is it Lord Shiva, Lord Buddha, or Swami Shri Sanjay Sai Baba?"

Student 2 did not understand what was happening. "You both seem confused," she said.

"You mentioned Lord Rama, Lord Krishna, or Lord Isa Kristu, and you mentioned Lord Shiva, Lord Buddha, or Swami. Did you perhaps watched something on Television and misunderstood?"

Student 1 replied: "No, that's not it. My parents argue every day. My mother says that Lord Rama is God, and my father says that Lord Krishna is God. They both try to convince me in their own way. And yesterday my aunt visited, and she said that Lord Isa Kristu is God. That's why I am confused."

Student 3 replied: "Yes, the same thing happens at my house also. My mother says that Lord Shiva is God, and my father says that Lord Buddha is God. They both tried their best to convince me their own way. And yesterday my uncle visited, and he said that Swami Shri Sanjay Sai Baba is God. That's why I am confused too."

Both turned to Student 2 and asked:

"And what about you? Do your parents also argue every day about who God is?"

Question: Who is the God to you, and why?

Heart-Work: Student 2 is YOU. Give your answer to the two friends. Always speak from your own view and your own experience.
