

A little girl of 10 years who loved Bhagwan Shri Sanjay Sai Baba very much. Every week in her SSSSB class, she learned good values from her gurus and practiced them daily.

Every morning, she woke up early for Light Meditation—and guess what? Her little puppy would sit quietly right beside her, closing his eyes as if he was meditating too!

She always reached school right on time. At school, she was polite and disciplined. She raised her hand before speaking, let her friends talk first. Whenever she saw a lonely classmate, she would sit and talk with them gently.

She also had a habit of quietly picking up the litters scattered by smaller students and put them in the trash bin. Seeing this, some students wondered why she is doing this.

Because she was quiet and didn't look for attention, she wasn't very popular among students.

One day, the school announced "The Best Student Award," based on manners, sports, and kindness. Suddenly, everyone started trying their best to look helpful, even doing chores loudly just to be noticed. However, the little girl didn't change a thing; she simply continued what she used to do.

On the day of the award ceremony, a special guest—the school's visiting doctor—arrived to announce the winner. To everyone's shock, he called out the little girl's name!

The doctor smiled and explained:

"I am sure you are wondering why this girl is the winner.

Every time I visit the school, I see this girl quietly cleaning the school without being asked.

A few months ago, my own son fell and hurt his knee. This girl safely helped him to the nurse and stayed to comfort him until I arrived. She didn't do these things for praise; she did them simply to follow the path of kindness taught by Bhagwan Shri Sanjay Sai Baba."

Everyone applauded for the little girl. The students who used to wonder earlier, now realized that her quiet acts of service were the truest form of goodness .

Question & Heart-Work: Can you share an experience where you did something that seemed small but special or meaningful for your school or community or at home?
