

One beautiful morning, the trees and plants gathered at the Sri Sanjay Sai Congo Matadi Centre (SSSCMC). They wanted to talk about how they help people and animals and how they could do even better.

The wise Baobab tree said: "We help the world every day. But can we do even more?"

The trees and plants nodded and shared their stories.

The Coconut Tree said: "I give coconut water to drink, and my leaves are used for houses."

The Banana Tree said: "My bananas are healthy and tasty, and my leaves help with cooking."

The Moringa Tree said: "My leaves make people strong, and my seeds clean dirty water."

The Mango Tree said: "My fruits are sweet, and my shade gives rest to people and animals."

The Papaya Tree said: "My fruits help people get better when they are sick."

The Teak Tree said: "My wood is used to make houses and boats."

The Hibiscus Flower said: "My flowers make tea that is good for the heart and make gardens beautiful."

The Aloe Vera Plant said: "My gel helps with burns and wounds."

The Neem Tree said: "My leaves heal and keep insects away."

The Baobab Tree said: "I give shade, food, and wisdom. My trunk stores water for dry times."

All the trees and plants promised to do even better in helping people and animals.

Today's question: How can we help people, animals, and plants?
