

🇬🇧 SSSSB Story 030a: Little Girl Learns to Share [5-12 years]

There was a joyful little girl. She was the only child of her parents, and everyone at home pampered her, they provided her with whatever she asked for—toys, colors, or storybooks etc instantly. Because of this, she never learned to wait or understand things practically. If her parents ever said “no,” she cried the whole day.

Her mother grew worried about this nature. Lovingly, she tried to explain things, but nothing changed. So, during her light meditation in the morning and evening, she quietly prayed: “Hey Hridaya Nivasi, the indweller of my heart, please kindly bless my child to become an understanding child.”

During one sunset, the girl was playing in the garden with her friends—children of her age and even some animal friends. They began sharing what they have learned from elders:

- A boy said: “My grandmother taught me to be content with what I already have. I don’t ask for more toys—I already have enough.”
- Another girl brought some colors and sketch papers with her: “Friends, do you know - My teacher says sharing is caring. That’s why today, I brought these for all of us to make art together.”
- Then a little squirrel added: “My mother tells me that we should love everyone. So I climb the mango tree and pluck mangoes for everyone. Let’s eat and play joyfully!”
- A parrot said, ok friends... then I sing a song. The bird started singing ... la la la then all the children started dancing joyfully.
- The girl listened quietly. Together, they laughed, shared, and enjoyed.

When she returned home humming “la la la ...”. the mother asked for her happiness.

The girl explained everything that had happened in the garden. She became thoughtful for a while .. then said: “Mummy, I have so many toys and stationery at home. Next time, I will share them with my friends.”

Mother said, oh, my child learned to share!, very good!. The girl says, “My friends are so good. Mummy, I will also try to be a good girl from today, I will not cry anymore when my demands are not fulfilled.”

Overjoyed, she hugged her tightly and whispered: “Thank you, God. I prayed for this change, and through these little souls, You helped my child to learn.”

Question and heartwork: What is one thing you could share with your friends tomorrow?
